NEW NAVY IS MENACED FOLKS WITH PAINS

Owing to the Insufficient Number of the Engineer Corps.

NOT ENOUGH FOR THE SHIPS

by Overheated Engine Rooms-Officers Caunot Stand the Mental and Physical Strain and Many of Them Have Collapsed.

A serious menace to the efficiency of the navy, which, though existing for some time, has only recently become intensified. is the condition of the engineer corps, whose numbers, it is claimed, are now wholly inadequate to perform the arduous duties exacted from them.

While the namber of ships wholly dependent upon steam power has stendily increased for the past ten years, swift cruisers replacing the old, low-powered wooden vessels, the number of commissioned engineer officers has actually decreased, notwithstanding the greater demand occasioned by the constantly multiplying com-plexity of our warships. From the facts at hand it would appear that the duties demanded in overheated engine-rooms have passed the endurance limit.

The customary alternation of shore as signments after three years' tours of sea duty no longer affords sufficient relief to the engineer officers to enable them to overcome the enormous strain to which they have been subjected.

Insufficiency in the number of engineers provided for by law, and the failure to supply them with sufficient and efficient assist-ance, are the chief factors in bringing about the deplorable condition of affair now existing.

HOW IT AFFECTS THE CORPS. A few instances are here given: The first is that of Chief Engineer W. W.

Heaton, who was sent home from the flagship Newark of the South Atlantic squadron to the New York Navy Hospital, where several months' treatment failed to restore his shattered health. When the Newark was harried down to Brazil during the was nurried down to brazil during the Mello rebellion. Heaton was well and strong. His death hast May was attributed to what is known in the service as fireman's heart trouble—a fatal disease which land dectors ascribe simply to overwork.

For nearly six months this year Chief Engineer R. R. Leitch was treated at the same hospital, having succumbed to exhaustion on the gunboat Machias. He was needed for sea duty, and as soon as the hospital authorities discharged him he was ordered to the Alliance, where, after a blood.

ordered to the Alliance, where, after a few weeks of unremitting strain he again collapsed.

The gunboat Machias also caused the Sparagus Kidney Pills.

The gunboat Machias also caused the prostration of Chief Engineer D. C. Gowing, who, after a long period of convalescence, was forced upon the retired list, the severe responsibilities which he had to bear on the Machias having completely incapacitated him for further active duty. The facet engineer of the North Atlantic squadron, Chief Engineer John Lowe, although a man of exceptional physique, went to pieces after a brief period of duty on the splendid cruiser New York and was sent to the naval hospital at Norfolk last January.

an American warship and her entire com-plement of men will disappear mysteriously on the high seas, leaving no one to tell the tale.

Protracted, ceaseless labor and worry in fitting out the Texas for her trial trip rulned the health of Chief Engineer Abadom Kirby, who had served inscathed all through the civil war. Vertically from the bridge to the five room the distance is sixty feet on the civil war. Vertically from the bridge to the fire room the distance is sixty feet on this battleship.

All these breakdowns occurred on the Atlantic station in the winter and spring, when work absard ship is least trying. The chief engineers were all referans of the late war, and the excessive work which saities of the service forced upon then deprived those that survived of such honors through eventual premotion as were their due, because compulsory retirement prevented their reaching the highest grades which continued health would have enabled

On the Pacific coast an equally unfor-tonate state of affairs prevailed. The chief engineer of the Ranger had no assistant to share watches with him, so he was comnetled alone to maintain the old ship's ma chinery in good order when far removed from repair shops. Although a vigorous man, not past middle age, be became physically wrecked, and had to be placed on the retired list last January. FORCED TO RETIRE.

FOR SALE—A bandsome residence on N. H. 8ve, near M st., 22 feet front; 8 rooms, and modern improvements; will sell for $7,960 if soid previous to December 1. ROSENBERG & COMPANY, 104 E st. nw., Real Estate, Insurance and Loan Brokers. The prostration of Chief Engineer E. A. McGee occurred in May on the coast de fense vessel Monterey's voyage from San Francisco to Callao. He was invalided home to the New York hospital, where, after FOR SALE—Nice new 6-room brick, desirably located on good street; heated by furnace; a. m. i., lot 163-4x100 to paved alley, price $2.800-$2.000 first trust, 5 years, 5 per cent; bal. $250 cash and notes of $15 per month; this is a good and rare bargain. Call and see BAKER & LAMPTON, 1301 F st. nw. no17-3t a hopeless attempt to restore his health, he was forced to retire from active service. It is said that on the Monterey there were five men to pall the engine-room bell and only one to answer it. It may be added that this is a current saying applying to most of the warships. FOR SALE—Elegant new corner house; large parking, good street; press brick, stone trimmings; 6 rooms; a. m. i., price, few days, $3,200; a great bargain; terms easy. most of the warships.

The Bennington broke down the health of Chief Engineer 4. B. Bates, who is now on shore duty, in the expectation of recovery, that he may again attempt the duties ery, that he may again attempt the duties pertaining to his grade, but although his sea tour is long overdue, his physician will not permit him to accept it.

Two weeks ago Chief Engineer H. Herwig had to be detached from the Marion and sent to the Mare Island Hospital for treatment, "overwork" again being the diagnosis.

As an indication of how reluctant engineers have been to awail themselves of the "roll of honor," as they call the retired list, as well as of the distressing physical conditions to which they descend before the medical boards relegate them to obscurity, three deplorable cases are cited. The condition of Chief Engineer Ezra The condition of Chief Engineer Ezra Whittaker was so pitiable that Commodore Melville forced him from active employment in an effort to save his life, but three months afterwards he died. In the case of Chief Engineer Heaton the retiring board delayed action so long that his death occurred before President Cleveland had approved the proceedings. Chief Engineer Hine, who died in June, was one of the ablest officers the corps ever possessed, a man of wonderful endurance who pluckily stack to the throttle until catirely wrecked. His vitality had run so low that his death quickly followed his retirement.

followed his retirement. AN OFFICER'S COMMENT. A prominent officer of the line who has commanded several of the modern cruisers commanded several of the modern cruisers commenting on these casualties today said:

"With more ships going into commission the few remaining mayal engineers will have still harder duties thrust upon them, and the list of breakdowns from now on will be a progressive one. It is not the engineers alone who are being sacrificed. The interests of the mayy and nation are being imperised, and the contingency of a fleet of crippled vessels may be the sequence of the collapse of the engineers.

sets may be the sequence of the collapse of the engineers.

"It must be recognized that there is no one on board our naval vessels who can take the place of the engineer. It is true that there are plenty of officers to ring the bell signal, but the number of men who understand the mechanism of the engines, which must be worked to respond to these calls, is very few.

"Heretofore with an appropriation of $30,000,000. the engineer-in-chief has managed to keep the adip going at a coat of $1,000,000. In all probability it will

"The modern man-of-war is nothing but an immense aggregation of machines, and one might expect that special inducements would be offered to secure and retain skilled mechanics to assist the engineer.

"But instead of the status of the machinist being raised in the navy it has been lowered graded by dividing them into three classes, and the highest class to which in future the machinist can aspire corresponds with his present position. The two lower classes of the machinist grade have an unimportant official status. There is no incentive for men from the merchant service to seek the position under such circumstances. It is absolutely impossible for a skilled mechanio with any self-respect and ambition to be satisfied with the inducements that are
